(This article is reprinted from an unidentified illegal newspaper which circulates secretly in Czechoslovakia. -- New Yorkske Listy note)

Stalin's Communism faces the opposition of a world front of independent and free peoples which is growing stronger every day. To bring the hour of deliverance nearer, it is important that the internal front against Communist tyranny and cruelty should grow stronger and increase.

It is necessary, therefore, to create within the country a secret but active solidarity of all those who feel the cruelty and senselessness of the regime, its aims and its methods. It is sufficient to begin with ordinary human contacts, among the workers of a single shop, or office or among the people living in the same house. Those in disagreement with the regime should not isolate themselves from their fellows.

Those who at present occupy official positions in the Communist Party, in the civil service, in state enterprises, or in the police, should build a wall between the Communist authorities and their victims by warning those about to be arrested; by not carrying out orders; and by hiding friends who are in danger. Members of the police and guards of prisons and camps should do all in their power to ease the lot of those who have been imprisoned and to help them contact the outside world.

Those who enjoy the confidence of their fellow men and whose anti-Communist sentiments are known to their friends should not refuse to hold office. On the contrary, they should seek positions in which they could lessen the interference of the Communist state in the lives of the citizens and delude its watchfulness. It is important for officials in brigades, trade-unions, agricultural cooperatives, etc., as well as those in public education and medicine, to be anti-Communists, so far as possible. They should remain in their posts until the situation changes, so that they can grasp the initiative at the proper moment.

STAT

The aim is a living structure of resistance which no state or party organization will be able to take over and control. These organizations will lose their original character; soon they will begin to rattle like an empty mill.

The present masters can mobilize the people into 10,000 demonstrations; they can count in millions the signatures on protest proclamations; they can force people to carry banners and standards with Communist mottoes; they can do all this, but they cannot control the thoughts of the people, or prevent them from speaking to one another and from exchanging understanding glances.
